Tax issue heard on Beacon Hill

By Patrick McGee
ADVOCATE STAFF

BOSTON — Arlington officials appeared before a state legislative committee on Tuesday to testify in favor of exempting the Medical Center at Symmes from property taxes, but two Town Meeting members were also there, testifying that that hospital should be asked to pay its fair share.

Charles Lyons, chairman of the Board of Selectmen and a close follower of the buyout of Symmes by Advantage Health 14 months ago, testified in favor of the home-rule petition that exempts Symmes from property taxes in exchange for acute care.

Town Counsel John Maher also testified in favor of the home rule bill that passed Town Meeting 122 to 49 in May.

Town Meeting members Bruce Whittle and Freeland Abbott urged the joint committee of senators and representatives not to exempt Symmes from property taxes.

Jim Marzilli, D-Arlington, is a member of the taxation committee. He has not said whether or not he supports the home-rule petition, but has hinted in the past that he does not want to see the institution become tax exempt.

Marzilli was noncommittal after hearing testimony.

"I think the general consensus on the taxation committee is Symmes Hospital has not yet proved that they will keep jobs in Arlington for the tax break, nor has anyone offered any reason why the Commonwealth should embark on this entirely new direction of tax policy," Marzilli said, adding that he needs more information before he decides how he will vote on the issue.

"I want to see the answers to these questions. There was not a representative from Symmes Hospital. Frankly, I'm not convinced that shifting $50,000 onto the backs of other taxpayers is going to convince them to stay," he said.

Lyons and Marzilli, widely seen as political rivals, have crossed SYMMES, see page 6A.

Retired First Baptist pastor reflects on theology

By Patrick McGee
ADVOCATE STAFF

In his 13 years as pastor, the Rev. Paul Jackson turned the First Baptist Church into one of the town's pillars of tolerance, as well-founded and as sturdy as the stone church itself.

With members of the congregation saying his message of acceptance was fully conveyed and adopted into their lives, Jackson has retired at age 61.

His belief in tolerance and acceptance seems to permeate all aspects of his life. It comes up in most topics of his conversation; from interpretation of the Bible to the accomplishments of Martin Luther King Jr., from gay students' rights to the character of his congregation.

Jackson said he finds his theological roots in tolerance in the Baptist denomination and in the teachings and life of Jesus Christ.

"Christ accepted all people and he had trouble with some of the Pharisees because they didn't ... If we want to see what God is like, we look at Christ and here we find someone who is very loving and accepting," Jackson said.

He said the very sustenance of being a Baptist is to respect others' views. The religion, he said, encourages people to derive their own meaning from the Bible as suggested in the Gospel of St. John. Baptists subscribe to "social freedom" a belief that "no body can impose their views on another person ... each person has to develop their own creed."

"We have to be very accepting and learn from others because none of us have a quota on the truth," he said explaining that unlike other Christian denominations, Baptists are baptized as adults when they make the personal decision to accept Christ.

He said his favorite passage of the Bible, Psalm 46, also speaks of tolerance and love of others. He said it urges acceptance of all when it refers to "the God of Jacob," a deceptive character in the Book of Genesis. "Jacob was not a very nice person so it says God is with people who turn to God ... All you have to do is be willing to let God work in your life," he said.

He said the work of Martin Luther King Jr., a fellow Baptist, is not a separate, modern development of the Christian denomination but an embodiment of its tolerant views.

"Martin Luther King really helped to exemplify the kind of things I'm talking about," Jackson said.

Stop & Shop land issue is dead for now

Vote delayed indefinitely

By Liz Buchanan
SPECIAL TO THE ADVOCATE

The School Committee closed another chapter of the long Stop & Shop saga Tuesday night, voting to take no action at present on the school land the store had sought to purchase.

The committee's 4-2 vote came in the wake of the discovery of toxic chromium contamination in the soil on the 1.37-acre site. Town officials Tuesday made a required disclosure to the state on the contamination problem, another step in the long process of studying and then addressing the situation.

"We are seeking to engage the Department of Environmental Protection as quickly as possible," Town Counsel John Maher told the committee. "It is a lengthy process by definition."

Planning and Community Development Director Alan McClennen Jr. said the first phase of the process, a formal study of the site, is likely to take about one year. The second phase, remediation, could take up to five years.

Both Maher and McClennen told School Committee members it would be impossible at this point to give more specific estimates of the time needed to resolve the issue or the cost involved. Maher noted that legal issues regarding financial responsibility for the contamination needs to be settled, also a time-consuming process.

Superintendent of Schools Kathleen Donovan advised the committee that it would be unwise to take a position on declaring the land surplus until the clean-up costs and legal issues are resolved.

Donovan said she had discussed the matter with Stop & Shop officials, who said the company was unwilling to purchase the land and also be responsible for clean-up costs.

Stop & Shop had earlier offered to purchase the land for $4 million, with an additional promise of $1 million in athletic facility improvements at Arlington High School. The School Committee had planned to vote in December on whether or not to declare the land surplus and available for sale.

Committee member Janice Bakey made the motion to take no further action on Stop & Shop's proposal, "unless and until all questions dealing with environmental quality and pecuniary liabilities ... have been thoroughly investigated and addressed."

Committee members Barbara Goodman, Martin Thrope and Chairman Michael Healy supported Bakey's motion, while Carolyn Simmons and David McKenna op-

Block plan pushed for redevelopment

By Robin Robinson
SPECIAL TO THE ADVOCATE

Town planners decided Monday to take a block-by-block approach to implementing recommendations made in the Arlington Business Community Study.

At the Redevelopment Board meeting with the Community Advisory Committee, Chairman Ed Tsoi said he will ask Town Meeting for $300,000 to use on three "showcase" blocks.

Tsoi suggested the town be divided into three zones — East, Center and Heights — with a committee for each zone.

"That's how you take a huge problem and make it bite-sized. Each committee can pick one block in their section, preferably one where something is about to happen, like the Garron block in the center," Tsoi said, referring to the block where The Chateau restaurant is moving into the old Garron's Restaurant space. "Where the engine is already working."

Vision 2020 member Jane Howard asked Tsoi where he came up with the $100,000 figure.

"What figure would you suggest?" he asked back.

"I don't know what kind of figure we need, but I can't imagine Town Meeting granting $300,000 right now," she said.

"Just ask for it," Tsoi answered. "Since I enjoy the hunt, I'll go after it. Why shouldn't public funds be used? If the whole town doesn't get

Outage hits Center

Business owners have electrical concerns

By Tom Rose
ADVOCATE STAFF

A blackout in Arlington Center forced more than a dozen stores to close Friday, sparking concerns among business owners that the area's electrical infrastructure is outdated.

Priscilla Korell, a Boston Edison community relations official, said approximately 500 customers were taken out of service late Jan. 18, after a field crew discovered a damaged cable underground in the vicinity of Broadway and Franklin Street.

Power was out for 14 hours for most customers, but up to 16 hours for others. Many businesses on Broadway, Medford Street and Massachusetts Avenue closed Friday, with hand-lettered signs posted on store doors explaining the reason.

Among the stores closed were Gail Ann Coffee Shop, Starbucks, Royal Discount Books, and Papa

Gino's.

David Gruber, general manager of the Arlington Food Coop, estimated the store lost $1,000 in sales and about $400 in food, while spending another $400 for dry ice.

"I'm going to make a claim against Edison," he said. "The only problem is they get to decide the claim."

Gruber said if he had been told the correct information on how long the outage would last, he would have rented a generator and been able to keep the store open. Instead, since he was told Thursday night that power would be restored by 9 a.m. Friday, he made no plans for a generator.

"They were very happy to give me answers, but it was the wrong information," he said.

Tom Rawson, whose software company is on Medford Street, closed his office for half of Friday because his computers were down. He and several other busi-

It responds to complaints by people in the Town who believe their civil rights have been violated, and initiates investigations into circumstances which appear to be the result of unlawful discrimination against any person in town.

Contact the School Committee office in writing by Feb. 15 and include some information about yourself and why you would like to serve on the Human Rights Commission.

Recycle those nicad batteries locally

The Arlington Recycling Committee has expanded its battery program to include all nickel-cadmium (Ni-Cd) rechargeable batteries.

Ni-Cd ("nicad") batteries are the type most often used in products like power tools, cellular and cordless telephones, laptop computers, and battery-powered toys. Depending on their application, some batteries can recharge hundreds of times, but eventually they must be replaced. The retail collection program ensures that old batteries are recycled properly and prevented from entering the waste stream. This is important because cadmium is a toxic metal which can cause effects similar to mercury poisoning.

Three stores in Arlington will now accept rechargeable batteries: Wanamaker Hardware, 1298 Massachusetts Ave.; Shattuck's Hardware, 24 Mill St.; Cameras Inc., 860 Massachusetts Ave.

The Recycling Committee is working with the Rechargeable Battery Recycling Corporation, MassRecycle and Wheelabrator Environmental Systems in promoting this state-wide program. To find other stores in our area that accept rechargeable batteries call (800) 8-BATTERY.

Don't forget to recycle your old button batteries as well. Many still contain high levels of mercury. Although the battery industry will be manufacturing such batteries without mercury within the year, the committee will continue to collect them for another few years until all of those with mercury have been disposed.

The following is a list of places to take your old button batteries: Arlington Food Coop, 7A Medford St.; New England Photo, 432 Massachusetts Ave.; Wanamaker Hardware, 1298 Massachusetts Ave.; Brattle Pharmacy, 1043 Massachusetts Ave.; Maida Pharmacy, 121 Massachusetts Ave.; Walgreen's, 324 Massachusetts Ave.; CVS, 25 Massachusetts Ave.; Grecian Jewelers, 27 Mystic St.; Council on Aging, 27 Maple St.; Cusack Towers, 8 Summer St.; and Dr. Thomas Fell (hearing aids), 375 Massachusetts Ave.

Town report ties for first place in state

The Massachusetts Municipal Association has awarded the town of Arlington first place in the MMA's Town Report Contest. The MMA formally presented the award to Arlington as part of the annual meeting and trade show held at the Boston Marriott at Copley Place on Jan. 19 and 20.

Arlington is one of nine communities that was honored for their 1994 Town reports. Town reports, published annually, include town meeting warrant items, financial information overviews of town departments, planning goals, and a description of the year's achievements.

Arlington received an award certificate at the Municipal Awards Reception on Saturday, Jan. 20, at the MMA Annual Meeting. The town tied for first place in Category I, which includes towns with populations of 12,500 or more.

"Town reports provide residents with significant information and contribute to a greater understanding and appreciation of their local government," said Geoffrey Beckwith, MMA executive director. "Arlington is being recognized for the very high quality of its work on this valuable publication."

The contest, which awards towns in three population categories, recognizes layout and design, quantity and depth of information, organization, originality, and overall usefulness of the report.

The MMA is a private, nonprofit, nonpartisan association of cities and towns.

Selectmen dedicate O'Neill meeting room

By Patrick McGee
ADVOCATE STAFF

Even though he died of cancer three years ago, Robert O'Neill, chairman of the finance committee for many years, was present at Monday night's Board of Selectmen meeting.

His memory was vividly brought to life when he was remembered by friends and officials in the Community Safety Building, where the meeting room was named after him.

Friends, family and public officials jammed into the room leaving standing room only.

"Bob would not just react to circumstances of the time, but would look to make things change," said Allan Tosti, the main speaker for the ceremony in O'Neill's honor. He spoke at a podium in front of a new plaque officially calling the room the "Robert F. O'Neill Memorial Meeting Room."

"I still miss him," Tosti said, getting a little choked up at the end of his speech.

"He was dishonest on the golf course," joked Selectmen chairman Charles Lyons, but added, "He was really a gentleman from sole to crown."

Lyons also noted the contributions O'Neill made as a public official.

"During tax limitation, he kept this town together and he did it with compassion, he did it with wit," Lyons said.

Peg Spengler, a former member of the Board of Selectmen and current member of the Redevelopment Board also remembered O'Neill's service and humanity.

"He's just one of the outstanding public servants we have ever, ever had in Arlington," Spengler said. "He had a wonderful sense of humor and he was able to see through so many charades. I think he's one person we will miss for ever and ever."

Selectmen choose new administrator

Caryn Cove, an Arlington resident and deputy director of operations for the Massachusetts Senate Ways and Means Committee, will become the new administrator for the Board of Selectmen, it was announced Monday night.

Cove, 26, replaces John Dunlap who was promoted to new assistant town manager and purchasing agent. She was hired by unanimous vote by the selectmen, according to Chairman Charles Lyons.

"We are most pleased that a person of your character, reputation, and competence applied for this position and we look forward to your quality service for many years to come," Lyons wrote in a letter to Cove.

"I am very pleased about it, I'm very excited," Cove said. "I'm interested in government," said Cove who moved to Arlington from her native Chicopee three years ago.

In the Statehouse Cove was in charge of a 30 person office and a $1.2 million budget, according to her resume.

In 1992 she worked as a legislative aide for state sen. Thomas Birmingham, D-Chelsea, who recently became the new Speaker of the House.

She graduated Cum Laude from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst in 1991. She also studied in England at the University of Hull and worked as a tutor for some time after her graduation.

She'll begin her work in Town

Hall in late February.

Town elections scheduled for March

Town elections will be held on Saturday, March 30. At that time Arlington will be hiring help for the next year. Up for election are 84 town meeting seats for three years, plus others for a year or two because of vacancies which may have occurred. Also up for election are the town clerk, treasurer, one assessor, two selectmen, and three school committee positions.

Deadline for picking up nomination papers is Feb. 9. Papers must be given to the Registrar of Voters by Feb. 12.

For more information, call the town clerk's office at 646-1000, Ext. 4054 or the League of Women Voters at 646-4667 or 643-7622.

POSTAL NOTES

Your mailbox could become a ballot-box.

Voting by mail is an idea whose time has come. In December, the State of Oregon held the nation's first statewide vote-by-mail congressional primary election. And, it has been used since 1977 for local issues and elections.

In every case, the same good things happened.

Election costs can be as much as $1 million lower, because there are no polling personnel to pay, no space to rent, no polling equipment to transport and set up.

It's secure and reliable, with no evidence of fraud, ballot-tampering or undue influence in fourteen years of use. Signatures on mailed ballots are checked against each voter's registration signature, a double envelope keeps the ballot secret, and, of course, all the criminal penalties for mail fraud and tampering apply to mailed ballots.

Voting by mail also increases voter participation—it broke all records in Oregon. It gives voters plenty of time to make a decision. It eliminates waiting in line to vote, and the problems that keep people away from the polling place, such as bad weather, age or physical handicaps. Voter participation has topped 90% in some contests.

Such results are gratifying to us at the U.S. Postal Service. If voting by mail works in Oregon, why not in other states, or even nationwide? We're glad people trust us to deliver their vote, and like the idea of bringing the ballot box and the voter closer together.

We Deliver For You.

Republican Congress blasted at environmental conference

By Patrick McGee
ADVOCATE STAFF

LEXINGTON — Congressman Ed Markey, D-Malden, mustered some of the environmental big guns on Sunday to reload support for the environment and blast the Republicans for trying to rescind environmental legislation.

Secretary of the Interior Bruce Babbitt and administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency Carol Browner both took the podium to praise Markey, who represents Arlington as part of his district, for his work and criticize the Congressional Republicans for trying to "roll back 25 years of progress."

Browner addressed the crowd of about 500, harshly criticizing Congressional Republicans for closing her department during the government shutdown and voting to drastically slash her budget.

"The president's plan will keep the environmental cop on the beat while the Republicans' plan lets polluters off the hook," Browner said, portraying the moment as no time to relax environmental standards. She said that two-thirds of the rivers and streams in Massachusetts are too polluted for fishing or swimming and 4.6 million Massachusetts residents have drinking water that failed to pass at least one water safety test in 1994.

Browner spoke before Babbitt and had to leave early to tour the oil spill off the coast of Rhode Island.

Babbitt talked about the Park Closure Bill that was eventually withdrawn from the House floor in the face of much public opposition.

"I never heard a single American — not even one — tell me we have too many parks," Babbitt said, eliciting laughter from the audience that, judging by their applause and questions, was largely made up of environmentalists.

He didn't wear a coat and tie as every other participant in the conference did, but looked like an outdoorsman with a shirt and sweater and slinging his nylon winter coat over the back of his chair.

The secretary said he could not reason with Congress and instead toured the country to build support for the land that had begun to be set aside as national parks in the 1930s.

In a slow and soft voice reminiscent of Charles Kurland, he painted a vivid picture of a journey floating down rivers and driving over the vast reaches of national parks. Conjuring up the imagery of traveling across the land and meeting many people, Babbitt touched on a piece of Americana that seemed to enthrall the audience.

"At each stop the crowds got larger and larger," Babbitt said, describing his trek along the federally-protected coast of Florida.

He accused Republicans of trying to kill some environmental protections by cutting their funding because, he said, they dare not rescind all of the laws.

"They know it would be too big a risk to debate in front of the American people," he said. The crowd gave him a standing ovation as he walked off the stage.

Other prominent environmentalist spoke at the conference in Lexington including Robert Cox, president of the Sierra Club, Noble Laureate Dr. Mario Molina and Devra Davis, a scientist well-known for her chemical research.

Arlington Redevelopment Board considers implementing ABC Study recommendations

involved, this will never work. Town Meeting needs to make a commitment."

Improvements made on the model block would spur the enhancement of other blocks on Massachusetts Avenue, and act as a model for a partnership between the town and merchants, Tsoi said.

At the start of the meeting, the board laid out the plan for discussion: breaking the items down into categories of fast, moderate and slow goals, and inexpensive and expensive goals. That itinerary was abandoned almost immediately. After a discussion on the possibility of changing zoning laws and non-conforming bylaws, Tsoi directed the discussion back to the implementation of the ABC Study, which was completed in October.

"Zoning is a means to an end. I don't want to talk about it now. I want to take advantage of the people assembled here to talk about the ABC Study."

Tsoi stated that the town's expectations of the board are unrealistic. "Everyday someone asks me, 'Why can't you fix it?' That's not how it works. We are not the private sector. We are the public sector." Tsoi said the business community and the town need to foster a partnership.

"One lesson I've learned from East Arlington's development is that the energy has to come from the community as much as from the board, so I suggest forming subgroups, one for each section," he said. "Each board member can attend a different meeting, and take clear, set endorsements made by that committee and bring it back and put it together."

CAC member Pat Deal said she was concerned with all the hypothesis and assumptions that are in the ABC study. "I need to know the how-to. How are we going to make these changes?" she said.

Board member Margaret Spengler answered by saying that if the study identifies a specific site or enhancement, the town should only see that as an example of what can be done.

"We need to use the study as a blue print for what you and I and the town want," Spengler said. "We can flesh out what we want. Now is the time for us to be involved and think seriously about what can be done."

After several members raised questions on how the town can control absentee landlords and vacant retail space, and why soliciting clean industrial and non-retail commercial business was not in the study, Chamber of Commerce president Carol Ryerson interjected.

"My blood pressure is boiling," she said. "I am very frustrated. Our questions have not been answered. We are picking over the same issues of last year and nothing is getting accomplished. The discourse is great, but let's get going."

CAC member Linda Olsen said, "I feel just the opposite. I think the study has been a wonderful visionary tool. The piece that's missing is leadership."

"We paid big bucks for the answers, and we got them. But now we don't have the key to turn on the engine. I want to be active," said CAC and Town Meeting member Peter Villandry.

Good Neighbor Committee Member Steve Baker said, "We need a solid idea (before we can act)."

Commenting on the members' frustration, Tsoi said, "I know your frustration, that feeling of 'we've been here before.' But you have to help us start. How would you like to see things done? We are our own worst enemy. The energy has got to come from a burning desire, a frustration deep within the heart of you."

After a brief discussion of the one block model plan, it was decided that nothing more could be accomplished until funding is granted.

Town Meeting member Ron Nigro said, "That's very positive. Much better than studies." After the meeting he added, "I don't think Town Meeting will go for it, though."

Babbitt: Minuteman National Historic Park can be extended

Bruce Babbitt, US secretary of the interior, said that it is possible for Minuteman National Historic Park to be expanded into Arlington.

The Arlington Business Community Study released in October recommends lobbying the government to expand the park into Arlington where some of the historic events also took place.

In a brief interview with the Advocate on Sunday, Babbitt said it's possible to expand the park into Arlington but might be "tough" with the current Republican Congress.

He suggested that Arlingtonians who want to see the park come to their town "form partnerships" and "call Ed Markey's office." Markey, D-Malden, represents Arlington as part of his district.

"It sounds good to me," Markey said saying he'd be willing to work with citizens who want to expand the park into Arlington. "It happens at Civil War sites all the time and there's a good reason to support it for Revolutionary war sites as well."

He noted that he sits on the House Resource Committee which has jurisdiction over the national parks.

"We can accomplish that goal," Markey said.

Pat Fitzmaurice, the managing trustee of the Old Schwamb Mill and a member of the Historical Society, said park would be a major asset to the town if expanded into Arlington. She pointed out that it would bring federally-paid professionally-trained park rangers that would attract tourists and business.

Some residents complain of how other communities such as Lexington get more mileage out of their historical sites while Arlington has numerous sites that don't get enough recognition.

Calling it "a powerful way to protect space" Babbitt also praised the open space bond bill, currently in the state legislature which would give cities and towns money to buy open space.

"Those are great," he said noting that similar bills have been passed in Florida and California.

A Break for Those Over 55

If you are a homeowner over the age of 55, you are entitled to a special one-time tax break. It comes as a $125,000 capital gains exemption from taxes owed on the profit coming from the sale of your principal residence. To qualify, you must have lived in the home for 3 out of the past 5 years. (Those who have been living in a nursing home must have lived in the house for only one of the previous five years.) This $125,000 exclusion can only be claimed once. It cannot be claimed by a married couple when one spouse has already claimed it before the marriage. On the other hand, only one spouse needs to be 55 to claim the exclusion on a jointly owned property. If the home is not owned jointly, the spouse whose name is on the deed at the time of sale must be 55 to qualify for the exclusion.

DuPONT REAL ESTATE keeps up-to-date with real estate regulations through ongoing training and information programs. If you're over the age of 55 and need additional information on the tax benefit described in this week's column, contact us at 648-6630 for reliable guidance. Our goal is to save our customers time and money. Buyers, we'll help you determine your price range, show you homes listed in virtually any town, and negotiate your offer. Sellers, we'll ensure that you receive full market value. Our creative and highly energetic staff is committed to helping you save time and money. We are conveniently located at 112 Massachusetts Ave.

HINT: The difference between the net sale price and the seller's "basis" in the property is the amount that is subject to tax.

THE BURDEN OF PROOF

In most civil cases, the plaintiff's ability to meet his or her "burden of proof" is measured by whether a reasonable person would have concluded that it was "more likely than not" that the defendant caused (and was liable for) the plaintiff's injury or loss. According to this "preponderance of the evidence" standard, the plaintiff is entitled to a verdict if the evidence favors him or her by even the slightest amount. Because the Bill of Rights treats a criminal conviction as a more serious consequence than a finding of civil liability, the standard of proof is much higher. The prosecution must demonstrate the defendant's guilt "beyond a reasonable doubt." Those who entertain the idea of filing a civil suit should make this distinction regarding the burden of proof and not be deterred by the mistaken notion that he or she must prove his or her case beyond the standard prescribed by the law.

With the complexities of the law and society, you need the training and knowledge of an experienced trial lawyer. Whether through a court battle or outside arbitration, the achievement of a successful result of your legal dilemma is our prime goal. With us on your side, you can be confident that your case will receive the most innovative defense possible. If you are in need of legal counsel, please call us today for an appointment. We are conveniently located here in Arlington and office hours are by appointment.

According to some estimates, approximately 90 percent of civil cases are settled before trial.

Power fails in town center

ness owners shared Gruber's concern about the condition of the electrical infrastructure.

Last year an underground transformer in the Center was replaced in an emergency action.

Korell said the most recent emergency decision to take the customers out of service was made because of an impending rainstorm Friday evening. If the damaged cable was kept in service, there was a chance that seeping water could have caused a more extensive outage, Korell said.

The cable failure was discovered Jan. 16 by a crew replacing a utility pole knocked down in an accident. Efforts to repair the cable failed, so it had to be replaced, Korell said.

She did not know how old the cable was, but said old cables are not necessarily a problem, citing the copper that was used in them as a better conductor than current aluminum wiring.

Korell also said the outage is not in the same area that experienced four outages during the summer. That occurred in East Arlington, prompting town officials to ask Korell to report to them on the status of the area's electrical infrastructure.

Symmes tax issue heard by subcommittee

swords in the past over the Symmes issue. Lyons once told Marzilli, "I'd appreciate it if it doesn't get bogged down in the legislative process." Marzilli later said the Symmes legislation was "dead" because of Lyons' "inaction."

Fighting words weren't present at Tuesday's hearing, however, with Lyons thanking Marzilli for sitting on the committee and Marzilli listening quietly to the testimony from both sides.

Lyons told the committee that ambulances will not take patients to Symmes if acute care is gone.

"We believe that level of service at Symmes is a matter of life and death," Lyons said, pointing out that if Symmes is the only acute-care hospital in the state with a property tax levied against it. He also pointed out that Symmes is the third largest employer in the town.

"This is the most important home-rule legislation I've ever had the opportunity to appear in front of a committee about," said Maher, who has been counsel to the town of Arlington for 17 years.

He said exempting Symmes from $48,000 in property taxes would only raise taxes $3.39 per household.

"Really what we're asking people to do is pay $1 more per year," he said.

Maher admitted to the committee that giving the hospital tax exempt status would not guarantee that they will keep acute care, but he said it makes the town a "player" in negotiations to keep the service. The home-rule petition says the tax exempt status will be revoked if acute care is ended.

"I don't want to give anyone an excuse right now to eliminate acute care services in Arlington," Lyons said following Maher's comments. He said the home-rule bill is revenue neutral because the money will be collected from other sources.

"It's not revenue neutral to me and to every other tax payer in Arlington," objected Whelple when it was his turn to speak.

He said the hospital sits on nearly 16 "highly-developable" acres that was, according to him, greatly underestimated by town assessors after Symmes was taken over.

Calling $48,000 an "artificial figure," Abbott also accused the Board of Assessors of underestimating the value of the land.

"It would be a terrible public policy to give a for-profit hospital tax-free status," Abbott said. "On principle, which is what this measure is about, it is a very bad idea."

State Sen. Robert Havern, D-Arlington, and Rep. Anne Paulsen, D-Belmont, testified in favor of the home-rule bill in comments so brief they did not even take a seat as everyone else did.

Pastor reflects on years at First Baptist Church

Under his guidance, the church began holding an annual Martin Luther King celebration seven years ago.

"He always speaks about Martin Luther King very favorably. He also speaks about the acceptance of people and trying to help them better themselves," said David Gray, a member of the congregation and chairman of the pulpit search committee that hired Jackson 13 years ago.

"Other people have said that they feel comfortable in this church because they're treated as individual human beings," Gray said noting that his wife, who is Jewish, always felt comfortable in the church and around Jackson. "I think that's sort of the attitude he tries to convey to people. He's also a peacemaker ... We're a lot friendlier church with him around, friendlier to each other as well as to other people."

When William Cooper moved to Arlington in 1984 she said she had never been to a predominantly white church before but soon came to feel at home at the First Baptist Church.

"People who come into the church are welcomed by the congregation and I attribute a lot of that to Paul," she said. Cooper said she saw his respect for people as individuals when she asked him to speak at her aunt's wake even though he did not know her.

"He talked about her not as if he knew her but as a fellow human being with a lot of dignity and grace and I'll never forget that about him," she said.

Jackson's philosophy didn't just filter down into his sermons but also into his activities and groups he joined. He was a member of the Arlington Interfaith Group, Arlington Citizens and Clergy Embracing Pluralism and Trust (ACCEPT) and the Massachusetts Department of Education's Safe Schools Program, a group advocating for safety of gay students in public schools.

According to family legend, Jackson was sick with pneumonia in northern Maine at the age of only six-months-old. Shortly after doctors told his parents they expected him to die his 7-year-old brother came into the room and prayed that he would survive and become a minister. Jackson said he was told this story when he was 10 years old — the time in his life when he decided to become a minister. He recalled the story and said simply, "I think God called me."

Jackson was a pastor in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maine before coming to Arlington in May of 1982.

"I'm going to take three months to read and think. We plan to live in Arlington for a while," Jackson said referring to his retirement with his wife, Eleanor, a staff member of Arlington High School. He said, however, that it is not customary for a Baptist minister to attend the church he or she was once pastor of.

Educators... Have It Your Way!

It takes about 18 months for most textbooks to be published, that's why most are already out-of-date by the time they're available to you and your students. The best solution is to devise your own textbook or "course pack" from the wealth of materials that are current and pertinent to your curriculum. Book Tech will show you how to do it, and produce it in days.

Our Streamlined Process Features:

- Pick-up of your hard copy or disk
- Clearance of any copyright permissions in a few days
- Scanning of your text, diagrams, and photographs
- Creating covers, table of contents, tabs, & pagination
- Electronic storage for immediate changes & reprints
- Delivery of digitally-printed, bound texts of stunning quality direct to your classroom in any quantity

INSIDE ARLINGTON

ARRESTS

On Jan. 17 at 7 p.m., police went to Sutherland Road for a report of a fight between a boyfriend and girlfriend. A 42-year-old woman had run out into the street to escape her boyfriend, who allegedly threatened her with a knife. The woman said the boyfriend broke into her home on Lorne Road. He allegedly took a 12-inch carving knife from the kitchen and she pushed a dresser against the bedroom door to keep him away from her. He pushed the door open and threatened her with the knife. She then ran to Sutherland Road, where police met her and arrested the 23-year-old Dorchester man for assault by means of a dangerous weapon. An emergency restraining order was issued.

On Jan. 17 at 10:30 p.m., police went to Coolidge Road to serve a warrant. A 32-year-old Arlington man was arrested for a warrant for violating a restraining order.

On Jan. 21 at 10:30 p.m., police went to Fordham Street for a report of a family fight. A 21-year-old woman said her boyfriend pushed her down several times and pulled her hair. During the argument, he also allegedly pushed her 76-year-old grandfather and bruised his elbow. The 24-year-old Revere man was arrested for assault and battery. At the police station, a small explosive believed to be a quarter stick of dynamite was found in his pocket. He said he found it in the back of the taxi cab he drives and decided to keep it. He was also charged with possession of an explosive device.

BREAKING AND ENTERING

On Jan. 18, an officer was on patrol on Massachusetts Avenue in East Arlington and discovered that the door to the Irish Connection was smashed in. The store's jewel-and chest. He was taken to the Medical Center at Symmes.

On Jan. 19 at 11:55 p.m., a two-year-old boy was reported to be suffering from a cough and congestion on Varnum Street. He was taken to Children's Hospital.

On Jan. 20 at 9:30 a.m., a one-year-old boy on Brattle Place was reported to be making short gasps and shaking. He was given oxygen and taken to Winchester Hospital.

On Jan. 21 at 8:03 a.m., a 49-year-old woman was reported to have slipped on the ice on Thesda Road. She hit her head when she fell and was found face-down on the ground when the rescue squad arrived. She said she lost consciousness for five minutes. She was placed in a cervical collar and taken to the Medical Center at Symmes.

Store land issue tabled indefinitely

posed it. William Carey was absent.

Simmons said she could not support the motion because she felt the vote should be on whether or not to declare the land surplus. But she also noted that the votes would not be there in favor of declaring the land surplus.

McKenna agreed, in comments after the vote, that he would have liked to vote directly on the surplus issue.

"What we've done now is put it off for awhile, but some future School Committee will be dealing with this in the future," McKenna said.

ABOUT ARLINGTON PEOPLE

Resident pursues cancer research

Arlington resident Elizabeth Mick was cited recently for her contributions to research in cancer cell biology and radiation therapy. Mick pursues research part-time under the direction of Susan Braunhut, professor of biological sciences at the University of Massachusetts Lowell. Mick also works at the Brigham and Women's Hospital Blood Bank in Boston.

Braunhut was invited to present the results of her research at the 10th International Congress of Radiation Research, held recently in Wurzburg, Germany. Mick was named co-author of the paper "Matrix Metalloproteinases (MMPs) Produced by Irradiated Endothelial Cells."

Mick moved to Arlington in December.

2nd Lt. Ryan receives security training in TX

Air Force 2nd Lt. John J. Ryan III has completed the Air Base Defense Command course at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas.

The course trains selected security police personnel who are or will be assigned to a headquarters Base Defense Operations Center (BDOC). It is the most-advanced ground-combat-skills course offered by the United States Air Force Security Police Academy.

Ryan is the son of Jocko and Barbara Ryan of Arlington.

His wife, Air Force 2nd Lt. Olga Ryan, is the daughter of John and Becky Mohler of Tombstone, Ariz.

He graduated in 1990 from Arlington High School, and in 1994 from Norwich University, Northfield, Vt.

Two residents join Peabody & Arnold

Joseph D. S. Hinkley, managing partner of the Boston law firm Peabody & Arnold announced recently that a group of 25 lawyers has joined Peabody & Arnold. Within that group are two Arlington attorneys.

Kathy Colbert, an associate from Arlington, specializes in commercial law, insurance defense, malpractice defense, and directors and officers liability. She is a graduate of New England School of Law.

Kevin O'Leary joins the firm as associate and specializes in civil litigation, premises liability, personal injury law, railroad law, insurance defense, and immigration law. He is a graduate of University of Chicago and Boston College Law School and currently resides in Arlington.

The group provides comprehensive defense litigation services, primarily to insurance companies, in the areas of directors and officers liability, professional malpractice liability, premises liability and general liability. They are also very active in general and commercial litigation.

NEWS NOTES

Club seeks funds to help with renovations

During the last 58 years the Arlington Boys and Girls Club has had a meaningful and positive impact on the lives of tens of thousands of children and adults who have passed through its doors. The club has profoundly influenced and enriched the quality of their lives. As we approach the next millennium, there will be greater demands for quality programming and services that are offered at the club. To meet the club's current needs and position it to meet the additional demands in the next century, the Boys and Girls Club will need to make a major renovation and essential repairs to the facility which is more than 32 years old. The project includes:

- Upgrade of locker room facilities and bathrooms, and improve access to the pool area to meet the needs of the handicapped and related work
- Enhance fire alarm system to ADA requirements and related work
- Redesign and modernize poorly ventilated and outdated fitness room, refurbish gymnasium floor, replace doors and related work

- Establish a pilot program to focus on weight training, fitness and wellness for all members and especially teens. A remodeled fitness area and instructions in proper techniques would be a major attraction which would significantly advance the state of teen programming at the club beyond the year 2000.

The club has received conditional grants in the amount of approximately $63,000 from various sources but must raise the balance of $62,000.

Send donations to the Arlington Boys and Girls Club, Building Renovation Fund, 60 Pond Lane, Arlington, MA 02174. All donations are tax deductible. Help the club continue its mission that was started almost 60 years ago by a group of caring and concerned citizens who saw a need in the community and believed in the adage "It takes a whole community to raise a child."

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL
Volume 23-Report No. 3
Massachusetts House and Senate
Jan. 19, 1996

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BEACON HILL ROLL CALL continues its series of reports on legislation approved by the legislature during the first half of the 1995-96 session and signed into law by Gov. Weld. There were no roll calls in the House of Senate last week.

POSTPONE HEALTH CARE (H 5618) — House 148-2 (no Senate roll call), approved and Gov. Weld signed a bill postponing until Aug. 1 the universal health care law requiring companies with six or more employees to offer their workers health insurance or pay $1680 per worker into a state fund to provide health care to the uninsured. The law was scheduled to take effect in January. Opponents of the delay said they favored repealing the mandate.

A Yes vote is for the delay. A No vote is against the delay.

Rep. Jim Marzilli voted yes.

Rep. Anne M. Paulsen did not vote.

MEDICARE CUTS (H 5551) — House 118-31, approved resolutions urging the state's congressional delegation to oppose the proposed reductions in the growth of federal Medicare and Medicaid benefits for the elderly, poor and disabled. The resolutions were House resolutions and do not go to the Senate or Gov. Weld for consideration.

A Yes vote is for the resolutions.

A No vote is against the resolutions.

Marzilli voted yes.

Paulsen voted yes.

CHILD BIRTH (S 2000) — Senate 36-0, (no House roll call), approved and Gov. Weld signed a bill requiring private and public health insurance plans, including health maintenance organizations, to cover a minimum two-day hospital stay following vaginal births and a four-day stay following a Caesarean section. The proposal allows the attending doctor or certified nurse midwife, in consultation with the mother, to make a decision to shorten the stay.

A Yes vote is for the bill.

Sen. Robert Havern voted yes.

SUPPLEMENTAL BUDGET (H 5116) — Senate 37-0, (no House roll call), approved and Gov. Weld signed a $108 million fiscal 1995 supplemental budget. Provisions include $550,000 for a summer jobs youth-at-risk program; millions of dollars to fund various collective bargaining agreements; and $4.9 million to pay vendors for snow and ice removal last winter.

A Yes vote is for the supplemental budget.

Havern voted yes.

DSS SUPPLEMENTAL BUDGET (S 1891) — Senate 30-0, (no House roll call) approved and the governor signed a fiscal 1995 supplemental budget providing $8.5 million to replenish

Department of Social Services (DSS) accounts which are running out of money.

A Yes vote is for the $8.5 million.

Havern did not vote.

BANK TAX REDUCTIONS (S 1974) — Senate 35-2 (no House roll call) approved and Gov. Weld signed a bill reducing the state's bank tax rate from 12.3 percent to 10.5 percent over five years.

A Yes vote is for the tax reduction. A No vote is against the tax reduction.

Havern voted yes.

Coming Up on Beacon Hill

STALKING (S 2044) — The Criminal Justice Committee is considering a bill making it a crime to stalk a person by telephone. Sponsored by Senators Bruce Tarr (R-Gloucester), James Jajuga (D-Methuen), Rep. Brian Cresta (R-Wakefield), Robert Hargraves (R-Groton), Edward Connolly (D-Everett) and Gale Hahn (R-Westfield).

BICYCLE PATHS (H 1940) — Gov. Weld has amended and sent back to the legislature a bill requiring the state to provide for the accommodation of bicycle and pedestrian traffic in the planning and construction of highway projects unless it is determined that the accommodation would conflict with public safety or environmental concerns. Gov. Weld amended the proposal to allow the decision to also be based on "costs and benefits" involved. Sponsored by Rep. Anne Paulsen (D-Belmont).

GUN FREE SCHOOL ZONES (H 5210) — The Criminal Justice Committee is looking at a proposal imposing a minimum mandatory two-year prison sentence on anyone who possesses a firearm within 1,000 feet of any public or private school. The bill exempts law enforcement officers and individuals licensed to possess a firearm if the firearm is not loaded and is in a locked container or locked rack on a motor vehicle. Sponsored by Sen. Cheryl Jacques (D-Needham) and Rep. Rachel Kaprielian (D-Watertown).

HOME ADDRESSES (S 1966) — The House has given initial approval to a Senate-approved bill prohibiting the disclosure of the home address or telephone number of employees or families of employees of law enforcement, the department of youth services and the correctional, public safety and criminal justice system. Sponsored by Attorney General Scott Harshbarger and Sen. Cheryl Jacques (D-Needham).

The vote

One could almost hear the sickening strains of Muzak fill the School Committee room Tuesday night as the school system operators put interested Arlington residents on hold again.

The much-awaited vote on the issue of whether to surplus school land — an action that would be the first step toward selling the land to Stop & Shop — never happened. Instead, School Committee voted 4-2 to put off any action on the land, disappointing some resident who thought they would get to hear a final vote on the matter.

Was the vote in the best interest of Arlington schools? Probably. Was the motion the 'right' one for School Committee to have considered? No.

What has jammed School Committee's switchboard is the fact that it is not limiting itself to this single issue: is the 1.3 acre plot Stop & Shop wants actually surplus land.

Either it is or it is not. The extent of chromium contamination should not cloud this issue. How much money can be made by selling the parcel does not make the land surplus or not surplus.

The School Committee's job in this matter is to either make the land available, or pull it off the market. If the land is surplus, let town officials sell it at the proper time.

Committee members have complained about how Stop & Shop has taken valuable time away from other issues. It has, and there is no one to blame for this but the seven members on the School Committee. Many people in town would be more than pleased to see the Committee get out of the real estate business.

Committee member Marty Thrope — who once again boldly addressed the real issue in declaring his stance that the land is not surplus — equated Tuesday night's decision with letting the "elephant out of the living room."

The elephant will now loom in School Committee's backyard, threatening to barge inside at a whim, disrupting proceedings once again. It is too bad School Committee did not decide to either put the beast on the selling block, or put it to sleep.

Challenger

By Anthony L. Bernacchi

As I write, the tenth anniversary of the tragic explosion of the Space Shuttle Challenger on January 28, 1986, is only days away. One can hardly pick up a newspaper or turn on a television without seeing or hearing some reference to Sharon Christa McAuliffe, the teacher who was killed in the explosion, or to read some plan to memorialize her.

Perhaps the majority of schoolchildren today are too young to actually remember the Challenger tragedy, if they had even been born yet at all. With all this attention paid to McAuliffe, I fear that many children may assume that she was the commander or pilot of Mission 51-L. They may even think she was the first woman ever to fly on a space mission. Of course, she was actually a teacher/observer who had been preceded on space flights by several other women from both the U.S. and the U.S.S.R.

Furthermore, it may be somewhat overlooked in the current commemorations that McAuliffe was not the only person killed in the Challenger explosion. Six other brave people gave their lives that day for the sake of space exploration. I would like to tell you something about each of them.

Commander Francis R. "Dick" Scobee, age 46, was an aerospace engineer and Vietnam combat pilot. He was unaccustomed to the limelight and left it to his crewmates. He flew more than 6,500 hours in dozens of kinds of aircraft. A Star Trek: The Next Generation episode, "Tapestry," was originally supposed to make reference to a Scobee Hall in his honor, but that reference had to be cut because of time limitations.

Pilot Michael J. Smith, age 40, won his pilot's license before he knew how to drive a car. He received the Navy Distinguished Flying Cross, the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Silver Star, thirteen Strike Flight Air Medals and many others. He was scheduled to be Mission Commander of a shuttle flight planned for September, 1986.

Mission Specialist Judith A. Resnik, age 36, was the second American woman in space. She earned a PhD in electrical engineering and prospered in classes dominated by men. Judy was an accomplished pianist who played for hours at a time while she was in college. Like Scobee, Resnik was not a publicity seeker. She sought one challenge after another and told friends, "I'll never get old."

Mission Specialist Ronald E. McNair, age 35, the second African-American in space, earned a PhD in physics from M.I.T. African-American students would be better served if they were taught about McNair, instead of McAuliffe, since he was an African-American who earned a coveted degree at an institution known world-wide for excellence. McNair once told the congregation of his church that he "would not climb up on top of that big piece of smokin' hardware, strap myself down in that seat, sit down and wait for the count to zero...and sail out of this world unless I knew that Jesus got in first."

Mission Specialist Ellison S. Onizuka, age 39, grew up in Hawaii and was dubbed "the Lindbergh of the Big Island." Once, when he was in college, a friend asked to borrow a term paper to study from CHALLENGER, see page 11A.

A tribute to the crew of the Challenger

The following is the reworking of a tribute to the men and women who died in the Challenger disaster.

These weeks. These wintry weeks, with their cold nights and far shivering stars. We make plans, these weeks, buy seed catalogs, and count the days until spring. Control is what we yearn for always, and the power to look ahead somehow — to see what's coming next.

The illusion of control is one we cling to fixedly and lose hold of only rarely — when taking off in an airplane, for example:

As it taxis toward takeoff, a plane at first seems a rolling parlor. Folks read, and doze, and look out the window. Then it accelerates, and the trees and the asphalt blur to your sight and somewhere inside, all your instincts as a land animal cry out in disbelief that this metal craft, cumbersome and big-bellied as the Dodo, could ever lift or take flight.

But it does lift, and the blood billows in your ears. It banks, and there's your world sideways, a small sling of structures tossed like dice on a stretch of earth. Inside your head, things tilt. The tiny bubble in the carpenter's level of your brain leans way over to one side, and a small pressing voice asks, "Now, Death? Today? This very minute?"

LIFE AND ALL THAT

Then the plane straightens and the moment passes. With relief you turn back to your magazine. "Not yet," that small voice says at the back of your brain. Not this sight the last these eyes will behold.

We Americans especially think of our world as so cushioned, a place where even crisis holds itself politely in abeyance — 'til prime time is past and it can be ushered gravely onto the Late News by anchors with careful hair. We think the world is our parlor.

But the world is no parlor, as any earthquake can testify. Some days in this quiet house, alone for hours, I grow watchful. Water in a bowl sloshes gently but endlessly; a light over the kitchen tables swings minutely, but without pause. Who is doing that? I want to ask. As if a force that pushes boulders up through ice can't tweak a lamp-chain if it wants to.

It's ten years this week since The Challenger exploded. No one who saw it do so can forget how it looked: the twisted double worm of smoke and the Shuttle gone — just gone from our sight.

We loved that teacher from New Hampshire. "It will be like taking a bus," she told friends in Concord, to reassure them, but it was never like taking a bus, as the career astronauts well knew. And she must have known it, too.

Perhaps what shocked us most when it blew was that we all watched it do so: One minute, seven hale and joshing Americans; the next, a blank sky. Just like that. The hand of fate. The hand of God.

At first, NASA held that they died at once; but further study proved this false. They were awake and aware, it seems, until they hit the water. Much later, the black box retrieved, portions of their final moments leaked out to the world. One crew member cursed. One began a rapid series of orders. One said to another, perhaps quietly, perhaps even calmly, "Give me your hand."

They died different because they died all at once, whereas, except in war or catastrophe, most of us die by degrees — doing less, caring less, one by one cutting the slim silken cords that bind us to this life.

We owe God a death, as Shakespeare wrote. They paid theirs and fly free, beyond worry over plans, or control, or how many days must pass 'til a small planet tips and brings back what its creatures call spring.

"Give me your hand," one said, and the phrase is lovely, holding as it does all we can offer one another in love or friendship or at the hour of our death. All, and enough. May you sleep easy still, you seven heroes. You know things now that we only dream of.

Letters to the Editor

Mahon announces decision not to run

To the editor:

Several weeks ago, I took out papers to be a School Committee candidate. At the time, I felt I had available the time and energy needed to run a campaign, and hopefully, to serve as a committee member thereafter.

Since the holidays, I have taken a serious look at the time I want to spend with my children and the time I have for my volunteer activities, along with accepting a position as Deacon in my church, being awarded a contract I had bid on many months ago, running for the Democratic Town Committee, as well as continuing on with my activities on the local, state and federal level. After much thought, I realize I cannot run for School Committee this year as well as continue on with my previous commitments.

Therefore, I would like to state that I will not be returning my papers for School Committee this year. I am announcing this through The Advocate rather than by just missing the deadline, so that the incumbents as well as anyone else in the Town of Arlington who is interested in running for School Committee, will know my intentions.

I would like to thank the many people who have called or spoken with me personally and offered their time and commitment. I am confident that in the near future, I will be looking toward serving the town in an elected position. Also, for the present, I will continue to work with and for the Town of Arlington as I have in the past, and hope to continue to serve my community whenever I can.

On-street parking regulations work

To the editor:

We have recently heard stories and seen pictures of streets in some communities where snow removal has been made extremely difficult by parked cars. This should convince us of the value of the restrictions regarding on street parking that we have in Arlington, and we should reject attempts to repeal them. They contribute to the quality of life in Arlington.

Sidewalk cleanup needs improvement

To the editor:

I live in North Cambridge and enjoy walking up through East Arlington to Arlington Center often.

On my return home, I often stop in many of your stores, to pick up various items.

Today, I decided to walk on Massachusetts Avenue to Arlington Center. The sidewalks on both sides of the avenue were sheets of snow and ice. Many homeowners and storekeepers have worked hard to keep their walks safe and clean. But many more have done nothing.

With such a large elderly population in Arlington, residences and stores on the main streets should make an extra effort to clean their paths. If Arlington wants to encourage people to shop in their town, they need to improve sidewalk cleanup during the winter months.

Government needs to keep walks shoveled

To the editor:

I am tired of reading, every year after snow storms, about the bad shoveling habits of private property owners. I am sure that there are places in town where walks and driveways are poorly shoveled, but every morning when I go to the bus stop at Rte. 2 and Pleasant Street, I can walk a quarter mile on a continuous sidewalk shoveled out by (private) abutters until I get to Pleasant Street (Rte. 60). Then I have to walk over a hundred feet in the travel lane of a state highway, because no governmental authority seems willing to take responsibility for the sidewalk on the Rte. 2 bridge.

And if I decide that that's too hazardous and walk instead to the Mass. Avenue bus, the first (and often the only) unshoveled section of my walk is the frontage along the town-owned Menotomy Rock Park. The drifts there are huge, but a little preventive care — a snow-fence installed in November — would cure the problem.

Help, help!

Get the job done: get rid of the snow & ice

To the editor:

I have a very serious complaint that I feel should get attention. On Tuesday, Jan. 16, I had a close call with a man driving a car and taking a wrong turn at the corner of Massachusetts Avenue and Mystic Street. I had the walk sign and as I stepped off a pile of ice and snow on that corner I thought — Oh! My life was almost over. I was so shook up! I always make sure those corners — all four of them — are safe before I start to walk, but, trying to
